Gloss White Jap-a-lac used on an iron bed covers all the marks and scratches, making it as white and clean and new as the day you bought it. The finish is glossy, brilliant, tough, elastic and durable. Soap and water will not injure it in any way. Dead Black Jap-a-lac gives a wrought-iron look to all metal, and turns scuffed and common furniture and picture frames into stylish Flemish pieces. The design that looks 'common' in light wood, often lends itself beautifully to the Flemish effect.

An old picture frame, whether of wood or gold, can be renewed beautifully with Jap-a-lac.

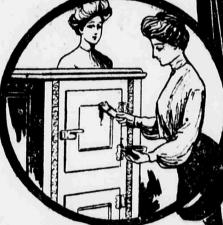

No end to its uses. And the beauty of Jap-a-lac is, that it costs so little, and you can do the work yourself-and find it fascinating.

ALL THEIR MEN WOMANLESS.

ALL THE GIRLS GONE TO ST. LOUIS TO CONVENE.

There Were 33 of Them, Counting Two as Equal to One Boy-Some Didn't Get Their Bonnets-Mysterious Handshaking Among the Stricken Men

Shy of various bundles and provided with trunks full of costly gowns and satchels crammed with campaign data, waving goodbys and calling final instructions to the husbards who were forbidden to enter the gate, sixty-six delegates to the biennial convention of women's clubs at St. Louis started from the Grand Central on a special train yester-

Two hours before the scheduled time for the train to start small groups began to gather in the station awaiting the arrival of the all important delegates. Warnings and advice crossed each other in the air.

The Mothers' Club was there in force, and assignments and notes bearing her forged and advice crossed each other in the air.
The Mothers' Club was there in force, and New York votes unless she be a mother or at least a married woman. All the arrangements for the trip were, nevertheless, in the hands of Miss Mary Garrett Hay, who was armed with a big bunch of roses and carried the honor with serious dignity. There were some other delegates to whom flowers had been sent and there were some who did not get all that was coming to them. Outside the high rail guard which separates the train paths from the station lobby, messenger boys, dutiful sons, husbands and admirers stood and vainly endeavored to connect with some one of the officials on the train or attract the attention of some one of the women who stood out on the platform. "Let me go past there just for a minute. pleaded one excited man with a large square bar under his arm.

"'Gainst the orders," replied Shaughnessy the gateman. "Stand back."

"But my wife-" insisted the man.
"Sorry for you," interrupted Snaughnessy, "but,— Tickets please," to one of the delerates. "Oh, dear, dear, dear," complained the

"Oh, dear, dear, dear," complained the delegate. "And of course you have to ask for that. Well, it's 'way down in my bag—ane of them. I'll show it to the other man I've got it all right."

"Rules, madam. I have to see it," remarked Shaughnesey.

"Don't look as though I was beating my way?" demanded the delegate. "We've got a special train, and I will go through. I'll lose the train if you keep on standing there talking and taking up my time."

"Serry, madam, but you'll have to show your tickets," said Shaughnessy.

"How stupid," said the delegate, and the satchel was opened and the ticket finally produced.

archel was opened and the time! Intally produced.

"But say, eld man," pleaded the man with the big box, "I gotter get through there. My wife told me to bring her hat develope here from the milliner's, an' this is it. If you've got a wife, you know what I'm up against."

Sorry," said Shaughnessy "send it by the reat passenger."

"Sorry," said Shaughnessy "send it by the next passenger."
The next passenger had five boxes of her own. And every one after her had an arm full. Finally a porter was called and tipped to take a message to "Mrs. Henry B. Perdant." Mrs. Perdant couldn't be found, and when the train finally pulled out Mr. Henry B. Perdant was still standing at the gate holding on to his big square

Two messenger boys who had boxes of flowers vainly tried to find Mrs. De Rivera and the Baroness Von Orendorf. They mally handed the boxes to one of the delegates to "deliver or do something with." A number of disconsolate looking men of various ages waved adieu to the train and then brightened up and shook hands when the red flag had gone around the bend.

The biennial will elect a president of the National Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Robert J. Burdette of Los Angeles and Mrs. Sarah Platt Decker of Denyer are the two most talked of candidates. The office, it is understood, will go to a Western woman. Mrs. Doré Lyon, president of the New York Federation of Women's Clubs, is spoken of as the candidate for vice-president. All the interest of the Eastern club women seems to have centred in this office.

The apecial train will arrive in St. Louis this afternoon at half-past 4 o'clock.

TRYING TO SAVE $77,000. Mrs. W. Stuart, Widow of British Consul at Boston, Involved in Four Suits.

Boston, May 14 .- A number of questionable transactions in which Willoughby Stuart, former British Consul here, is said to have been the person reaping the profit, and involving about $77,000, form the basis of four suits, one at law and three in equity, which Mrs. Stuart is prosecuting or defending in the Supreme Court, the evidence now being heard by an auditor appointed for that purpose. These suits will bring to light considerable of the record of the husband, who was committed to an insane asylum soon after it was learned that notes bearing the forged signature of Mrs. Stuart were being sold around town at much less than their face value.

Mrs. Stuart is the daughter of the late Arioch Wentworth, whose will, leaving the signature cancelled. by the Newton Centre Savings Bank against Stuart and his wife to recover on three by the Newton Centre Savings Bank against Stuart and his wife to recover on three promissory notes aggregating $20,000, alleged to have been signed by Mrs. Stuart or by her authority. Mrs. Stuart denies that the signatures are hers or that the notes were given by her authority. The other three cases are similar except that Mrs. Stuart is the plaintiff. One of them is against E. D. Chamberlain, the plaintiff seeking to have set aside and cancelled a mortgage upon property on Court street given her by her father. The mortgage was for $30,000 and Mrs. Stuart claims that the note and mortgage were not signed by her or with her authority. In this same case there is also a petition for an assignment of $7500 on the same grounds.

The Boston Towboat Company is sued to compel the cancellation of an assignment of thirty-one shares of stock in that concern, given to the Medford National Bank as security for money loaned to the former British Consul. Mrs. Stuart also asks the BUILDING LAW COSTS $50,000. Westminster Chambers Shortened and Damages Awarded Therefor.

BOSTON, May 14 .- C. W. Clifford, the auditor appointed in the case of Henry Bigelow and others, trustees of the Westminster Chambers, in Copley Square, against the city of Boston, has made his award, and it has been filed in the Superior Court. Mr. Clifford finds in favor of the plaintiffs for $282,706, with interest from May 28, 1898. The auditor awards $49,889.95, with interest from the time named, to the builders under the agreement of the parties. The city will fight to set aside the award The trustees sued the city because the Legislature passed a law limiting the height of all buildings in Copley Square to 90 feet.

Legislature passed a law limiting the height of all buildings in Copley Square to 90 feet. The trustees complain that they intended the ge higher than the law would allow them, and claim damages for not being allowed to put up the two extra stories they intended to build. A paragraph in the statute provided that the city should pay any damages due to hardships caused by the passage of the set.

This law was enacted on May 23, 1886. Before its passage the hotel could have been erected, and was so planned, to a height of ten stories. The law restricted it to nine. Another clause provided for an ornamental frieze, dome or spire being allowed, if licensed by the Park Commissioners. The Westminster Chambers people obtained such a license, put up the frieze, and made it a part of the wall of the building. This move the Supreme Court held to be an evasion of the law, and ordered the wall containing the frieze to be cut down to the ninety foot height. The order has been obeyed and the common misunderstanding has been that the suit was brought on account of the slicing off of the top. In reality the damages were sought because the buildiers could not make the hotel two stories higher.

MRS. RAWLINS'S BAD CHECKS.

MORE VICTIMS OF THE YOUNG WOMAN APPEAR IN COURT.

she Owes Hotel Bills Here, and in Indians. Too—Has Spent Most of the Last Three Years in Sanitariums, Her Lawyer Says-Held on a New Complaint

Mrs. Marshall Rawlins, who was arrested on Thursday for passing a check on the Second National Bank in which her account was overdrawn, and who, the police say has left a trail of similar checks all over the country, was held yesterday in $500 bail for examinaton to-morrow in the Jefferson Market police court.

The charge of petty larceny made by Detective John T. Howard for E. M. Knox, the hatter, was withdrawn, but Hugo Kaempfer of 832 Sixth avenue made a new complaint, upon which the woman was held.

Maurice Meyer, the woman's counsel, told Magistrate Cornell that his client had spent most of the last three years in sanitariums. She spent eight months in 1902 and several months in the spring and fall of 1903, he said, in a private institution at Castile, N. Y.

Mrs. Rawlins's demeanor has been pe-culiar since she was arrested. She has at Castile, N. Y.

Mrs. Rawlins's demeanor has been peculiar since she was arrested. She has not been at all excited, and evidently does not realize her position. When the first affidavit charging her with petty larceny was read to her in court she smilled as if the matter were amusing. She referred to an object that she had forgotten in her cell at Police Headquarters, where she spent the night, as something "that I left in my room."

She has, however, been extremely reticent about herself and her past history.

"There are two names which I am determined to protect," she said. "One is that of my mo her and the other is that of my second husband. He is a young college man, and I married him abroad."

She confirmed the story that she formerly taught in a boarding school here, and that she eloped with the son of a wealthy man. She admitted that she had lived in Germantown, Pa., but gave her pedigree as May she eloped with the son of a wealthy man. She admitted that she had lived in Germantown, Pa., but gave her pedigree as May Rawlins, 26 years old, of Chicago, and said that she had no occupation.

William Pabst, assistant cashier of the Second National Bank, upon which the check given to the Knox firm was drawn, was present and made a corroborating affidavit to Kaempfer's complaint. W. J. Arhold was present, representing the Arnold Shoe Company of Fifth avenue and Fortysixth street, to whom, he alleged, Mrs. Rawlins had given a bogus check.

E. B. Patch, manager of the Manhattan Hotel, showed a telegram from a hotel man in West Baden Springs, Ind., saying that she owed a bill there of $67. Mr. Patch also said that she spent thirteen days in the hotel in May last year, and owed a bill there of about $00. He was asked if the Hotel Keepers' Association would not prosecute the woman, but he was unable to say.

When Mrs. Rawling was arraigned before

Goldfinger. She left him to go to England, and took her son with her, with the intention, as she declared, of educating him as an Englishman. In a will made before she married Goldfinger, she directed that Arthur G. C. Fletcher of Pelham, N. Y., act as the boy's guardian, but her subsequent marriage affected the valkdity of this will, though she had added a clause forbidding that the boy's father, Isaac Rodman, should occupy the place of guardian. The boy has inherited a considerable fortune from the estates of his mother, his grandfather and others.

Burrogate Themas says that the natural and common law rights of the father in his son's berson were not materially affected by the mother's subsequent Dakota divorce, which is not recognized here. Therefore the domicile of the child is here, with his father, both in his own interest and in law, since he evidence has been effered to impugn the character of the father. prosecute the woman, but he was unable to say.

When Mrs. Rawlins was arraigned before the Macistrate yesterday, William Pabet testified that she had an account in the Second Natioral Bank, but that it had been overdrawn and that there had been no new deposits since March, 1903.

Kaempfer charged her with giving him a bad check for $5 in payment for waists and collars bought at his store.

Detective Sergeant Pepperted asked the Macistrate if he would accept new complaints against Mrs. Rawlins to-morrow.

"I will hear all the complaints you have to bring," said the Magistrate.

Nrs. Rawlins did not furnish the $500 bail and was looked up in the Jeffereon Market prison. Her lawyer said that she could easily secure the necessary ball, but that she did not want the names of any of her friends to be made public. name of Jones is to attend a Jones picalo at Soranton some time in July, when there will be a thoroughly Jones day. UNITED STATES SUES FOR $43,175.

No Charges of Wrongdolag Against William B. Bennett.

TRENTON, N. J., May 14.—The Federal Government began suit in the United States Circuit Court here to-day to recover $43,175 from William R. Bennett, of Elizabeth, who was formerly connected with the QuartermasterGeneral's Department at Washington. The claim is for the value of supplies for which it is charged, Mr. Bennett failed to make a satisfactory accounting. The action is a civil ene, and no charges of any wrongdoing ar made.

McNutt had been awaiting trial under $5,000 bonds on the charge of having swindled John Whyatt, a saloonkseeper of $60 Lexington avenue, out of $3,500 in a deal in mining stock.

Justice Bischoff set McNutt at liberty because there had been some technical error in the manner in which he was held for trial. McNutt was rearrested just as he was leaving the Supreme Court on a new warrant sworn out by Whyatt. He was then taken before Magistrate Breen in the Tombs police court, who held him under $4,000 bonds on the charge of having swindled John Whyatt, a saloonkseeper of $60 Lexington avenue, out of $3,500 in a deal in mining stock.
